Why should you participate in this unique seminar? –

Germany is a modern republic joining traditional democracy with the latest developments in social and political research. The structure of this country is diverse: There are regions devoted to industry as well as areas with low population density focused on traditional agricultural economies. In Germany we find world famous cities with millions of inhabitants as well as tiny villages with truly scarce populations.

Come and share in Germany's experience in local government administration. Don't miss the opportunity to establish contacts with German colleagues and subject matter experts. Visit important European capitals and cities and enjoy the unforgettable landscape of Europe's heartland. Participate in this developmental journey, exchanging new concepts and ideas with international professionals of similar background.
